18,000 POUNDS SCRAP RUBBER RECEIVED BY BETHEL OIL DEALERS

Figures given today by local garages and service stations indicate that receipts of scrap rubber here to date amount to 17,737 pounds. At this rate the community will be well ahead by the end of the drive June 30.

An appeal to every man, woman, and child in Maine to accept and fulfill a quota of at least five pounds of scrap rubber to be turned in to a gasoline service station before June 30 in the petroleum industry scrap rubber drive, was made today by R. H. Tyler, Chairman of the Maine Petroleum Industries Committee.

To meet a five pound quota, Mr. Tyler pointed out, it will be necessary for some people to turn in double or triple their quota, in order to make up for the small children and the adults who are unable to meet their full quota. On the basis of the last census, an average of five pounds per capita would produce around 2,118 tons or 4,236,130 pounds of scrap rubber in Maine, exclusive of industrial scrap.

"To win the war, America must overcome its rubber shortage," Mr. Tyler said. "Old rubber that lies around in basements, attics, garages, and barns only rots and disintegrates and does nobody any good. But if it is turned in to a service station before June 30, it will be reprocessed and will help materially to ease the stringent rubber shortage."

"Not only is this one way for every man, woman, and child to help win the war, but it will do much to prevent every individual from being deprived of the many daily necessities of life which are made of rubber."

"The scrap rubber campaign ends June 30th. Until that time filling stations will pay one cent a pound for rubber baby carriage tires, bicycle tires, automobile tires, automobile tubes, rubber soles or heels, rubber gloves, bathing caps, bathing suits and aprons, rubber sheets, pads, mats, and baby pants, rubber boots and overshoes, garden hose, and other articles made of rubber. Not only will filling stations pay a cent a pound for rubber, but everyone who contributes to the drive will be repaid a thousand times in satisfaction for helping to salvage rubber for victory."

Robert C. Clement has enrolled in courses in mathematics and chemistry in the undergraduate Summer Science Session at Middlebury College. He completed his freshman year there last month.

Edward N. Robertson, who was graduated with a B. S. degree in Civil Engineering from the University of Maine on May 25, has accepted a position with the Pittsburgh DeMonlele Steel Construction Co.

FUNDS FOR USO TO BE SOLICITED SATURDAY

The second campaign for funds to support the USO (United Service Organizations) is now under way through the nation. The purpose of the organization is to bring "a home away from home" to the many thousands of men in Army training camps and in the Navy and Marine Corps while off duty. It was formed and is continued through the united efforts of the YMCA, National Catholic Community Service, Salvation Army, YWCA, Jewish Welfare Board, and National Travelers Aid Association—and these bodies have the support of the American people.

The first USO club was opened in February, 1941, at Anniston, Ala., and by March of this year 647 clubs were in operation near Army and Navy posts in the United States and overseas.

The USO is peculiarly appreciated by the men of the service to whom it largely makes life endurable. The USO centers reach out to all sorts and conditions of men and renders them all important service at the time they need it most. USO is a vital part of the job of winning this war.

How the men themselves react may be judged from the comments overheard at USO near Camp Dix: "USO is the real USA" ... "It's the corner drugstore of the Army" ... "When you're SOS you stop at the USO" ... "USO is awful easy on the bankroll and I have more fun there than on ordinary liberty" ... "I come in just to walk over a rug again" ... "I chipped in a buck for the last USO campaign and oh, boy, I've gotten it back a thousand times since I've been in the service" ... "It's the first break we've had since we hit the Army" ... "Just what it takes to make the soldier happy" ... "It's not a club but a home."

The local canvass will be made on Saturday of this week by young people of the town. The solicitors are being organized by Mrs. Doris Lord, who has arranged her staff as follows:

Broad and Paradise Streets—Betty Smith, Carolyn Bryant; Main and Clark Streets—Norma Hunt, Isabelle Bennett; Spring, Mason, Chapman and Vernon Streets—Arlene Potter, Mary Wentzell; Church Street and the Park—Ruth Garber, Janet Palmer; Mechanic and Railroad Streets—Donald Lord, Lee Carver; Elm, High and Summer Streets—Jerry Davis; Mill Hill and Songo Road—Phyllis Merrill, Rebecca Philbrick; Skillingston—Betty Marshall, Margaret Baker; Mayville—Marilyn Boyker; Locke Mills road—John Brown, Leah Spinney.

West Bethel in charge of Mrs. Mary Abbott—Colleen Bennett, Ruth McInnis.

East Bethel in charge of Mrs. Florence Hastings and Mrs. Edith Howe—Virginia Hastings, Barbara Hastings, Clare Tyler, Marilyn Noyes.

Middle Intervale—Elizabeth Ward, Kathleen Brooks, Helen Foster.

The local chairman is Gerard S. Williams. Those not solicited may send contributions to the local treasurer, Carl L. Brown.

Thornes, Miss Patricia Tucker, Norwich, Conn.; Mrs. Ella Whitney, Miss Phyllis Whitney, Oxford; Mrs. Walter Inman, West Paris; Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Wentzell, Gorham, N. H.; Mrs. Ellen Wentzell, New Germany, N. S.

SCHOOL DAYS

By DWIG

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

Cecil Brown, the well known foreign correspondent, recently made a speaking tour of this country. In a radio broadcast from Los Angeles, he said that he had been enormously impressed by the incredible strides American industry is making in producing for war. At the same time, he added, he was disturbed by the excessive degree of optimism held by many of us. In short, too large a proportion of the American people are not yet convinced that this will be a long and hard war.

That kind of optimism is not held in informed circles. Most of the experts still think that another New Year's day will come before the United Nations will be able to engage in major, continued offensive drives against the enemy. In 1943, they forecast, a gigantic effort to knock Hitler out of the war will be made. Then, in 1944 the United Nations will be able to turn their full and undivided attention to Japan. And so, by that year's end, the war may be over.

Other experts consider that time table too optimistic. They argue that both Germany and Japan have immense armies and resources, and that it will take another year or two to wear them down and bring them to their knees. In any event, no informed commentator subscribes to the current rumors that the war is likely to be ended before 1942 passes. And none of them make the popular mistake of thinking that minor United Nations victories constitute major disasters for the enemy.

In the meantime this country has reason to be immensely proud of the quality and character of its fighting forces. After the debacle at Pearl Harbor it took us months to get organized. For a long time there was lack of accurate coordination between the various branches of the military services. Now, apparently, conditions have undergone a great change for the better. The gigantic Japanese-American sea engagement around Midway Island is an example. The Japanese, after making their feint at Dutch Harbor with a few bombers and pursuit planes, apparently expected that American commanders would hysterically disperse forces. In all probability, they definitely expected to take both Midway and Oahu. But the American commanders, working on extremely accurate information provided by the Intelligence services, were ready. The Navy, the Army and the Marines worked in perfect harmony. The result was the most serious setback Japan has taken in the Pacific war. The battle, coming on top of the Coral Sea engagement, must be causing plenty of headaches among the moguls in Tokyo. They caught our forces asleep at Pearl Harbor. But our forces are 100 per cent awake and on their toes now.

This latest Pacific battle is important for the beating handed Japanese military power. Its greatest importance lies in the fact that it may have tipped the scales of Pacific naval power in our favor. After Pearl Harbor, the Japanese fleet was supreme in the Pacific. Japan also had air supremacy. Now American war vessels which were damaged at Pearl Harbor are back in service, new ships have been sent to join the fleet, and our air power has been tremendously increased. Our production capacity is many times that of Japan in all fields. The Mikado, in brief, doesn't look as big and tough as he once did.

When we finally take the offensive in the Pacific, we may expect hard going for a considerable time. It is obvious that Japan has developed the mandated islands, as well as her own islands, to a very high degree so far as military power.

YOUR CAR How to Get the MOST out of it

KEEP IT LOOKING NEW

One of the obvious ways of getting the most out of your car is to keep its finish from disintegrating. Here are some house-keeping hints:

Park in the shade as much as possible. Don't let your car stand in the dew at night.

A clean, dry cloth is all you need if the finish is just dusty. Grit or sand or mud should be flushed off.

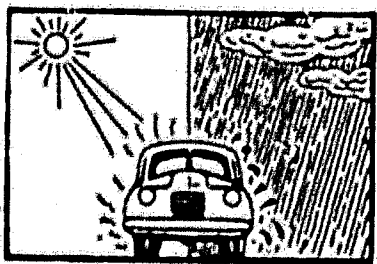

Cold water, cool car, cool location out of the sun are three things to remember when washing. Dry with a chamois or soft cloth.

If you use polish to renew luster, don't use too much; rub lightly and rub until dry. If the color seems to rub off, don't worry; it's just dead pigment. Polish helps protect finish at the seashore.

Chrome-plated parts should be protected by furniture wax or even motor oil. Remove rust with porcelain-type scouring powder. Wash frequently when salt is in the air or on streets.

Oil or grease on tires should be removed immediately with soap and water. Take dust out of car upholstery once a month with whisk broom and vacuum cleaner. Remove spots before they soak in and dry.

Note: This is the last of a series of articles on how to get the most out of your car based on the 64-page booklet, Automobile User's Guide, published by the Customer Research staff of General Motors. If you would like to have this booklet, send your name and address to Department of Public Relations, General Motors Corporation, Detroit, Mich. A copy will be sent you without charge.

er is concerned. She may have literally thousands of air, naval and submarine bases and her plan has been to create a ring of steel about her own part of the Pacific. It will be a real job to destroy these positions—and we can't do it overnight. We must expect losses as well as victories. But no one with any knowledge of American war production and American fighting spirit can doubt that the job will be done. The United Nations' commanders will not be satisfied with a partial victory this time. They intend to take the war straight to Berlin and Tokyo, and give the Axis powers a full taste of the kind of treatment dealt out to the countries they have subjugated.

TIRE RUBBER NOW SAVES U.S. FLIERS LIVES

Hundreds of Allied Airmen Owe Rescue to Inflatable Rubberized Boats

Imagine having your plane shot down in the vast empty waters of the Pacific, with the nearest island hundreds of miles away. You know your plane can't float more than a few seconds. Here comes the water ... Crash! Splash!

That's when you can thank the folks back home for giving up their tires. For instead of following your plane down to a watery grave, you grab a roll of rubberized canvas stowed in the cockpit, turn a handle, and climb aboard the slickest floating divan you ever saw. If you're in a big bomber, your rubberized raft has room for the whole seven-man crew, and carries food, water, oars, flares.

Hundreds of American and English boys are alive and fighting today because of these rolls of rubberized canvas, which are transformed into boats by an American-made miracle. For it was the engineers of a New York firm, Walter Kidde and Company, who developed devices for instantly inflating the boats with liquid carbon dioxide—known to most of us as the pop in soda-pop. Enough carbon dioxide to inflate a boat, they found, could be compressed into a quart-sized bottle weighing but a few pounds.

Kidde engineers discovered that carbon dioxide was the most compressible of common gases while they were teaching it how to fight fires, for the same clouds of gas used to blow-up life rafts also snuff out gasoline and oil flames instantly. Today, in fact, these same steel cylinders are built into warplanes to snuff out engine fires during flight, and are also carried by the score on airborne emergency trucks to smother crash fires and permit rescue of the crew.

U. S. sailors try out a new rubber life raft. These gas-filled boats are credited with saving more than 400 R.A.F. fliers forced down at sea.

Pilot Harold Dixon, Bombardier Tony Pastulas and Radioman Gene Aldrich sit on the carbon dioxide inflated raft in which they drifted 100 miles in 34 days after their land plane was forced down in the Pacific.

INVEST IN VICTORY!

Our boys can take the War to the enemy, if we back them up with ships and tanks and guns! But that takes money!

Help your Government to put the tools of war into the hands of our soldiers by purchasing War Savings Bonds and Stamps. And remember... just one Bond can't lick the Axis any more than just one gun! It takes millions of Americans buying War Savings Bonds and Stamps every day!

Bonds cost $18.75 and up... and they pay you back one-third more in only 10 years! Stamps cost 10¢, 25¢, and up... soon total the price of a Bond if bought regularly.

Mrs. Laurence Lord read an original poem which she composed for the occasion.

Final Exam

WHILE OFFICERS watch, a tough Dutch sergeant of the Netherlands Legion in Canada passes an examination in the handling of a sub-machine gun. Recruited from all over the world, the Netherlands Legion is carrying on the traditions of the Dutch Army, which proved its worth in the East Indies. Months of training have developed the Legion into a hard-fighting force, ready to take another crack at the Axis.

Be Careful of Cords

Cords are precious. Lamps and appliances just can't get along without them, and Uncle Sam needs the copper and rubber they contain for war materials. Judging by that, it's our job to prolong the life of the cords we already have on hand.

Mrs. Kiene

Cords can take it, though, if you handle them with care and repair them at the first sign of wear. First of all, remember that cords bruise easily -- and see that they don't get knotted and twisted or shoved into a drawer any-which-way. Such rough treatment wears out the insulation and leads to exposed wires and possible shock or to short circuits and blown fuses.

Instead, wrap the cord around a small appliance when it isn't in use. Wait until the appliance is cool, of course, for heat damages the covering of a cord as much as careless treatment. Hang extra cords on a well-rounded hook or coil them loosely and fasten them with a metal clip or rubber band before putting them away. Always connect a cord at the appliance end, then at the wall outlet. To disconnect it, grasp the plug at the wall outlet and remove it with a firm quick motion. Never yank the cord itself -- it's a strain on the cord, and it isn't safe either.

Once a cord becomes frayed, it should be repaired right away by someone who knows how. Husbands usually do, and it's something you can learn, too, with a little coaching. If only the covering of the cord is worn, it's safe to wind it with friction tape. Don't attempt to mend a broken plug -- it should be replaced.

NAGGING BACKACHE

Max W. Doan's Kidney Action. Don't Neglect It!

Modern life with its constant hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking, exposure, contagion, etc., causes kidney trouble. The kidneys are the filters of the body. If they are not working properly, the whole system suffers. Symptoms of disturbed kidney function may be nagging backache, persistent headache, dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of strength and energy. Other signs of kidney trouble are frequent urination, scanty or too frequent urination. In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. They have been winning new friends for more than forty years. Be sure to get Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Then try to isolate your don't let confusing backgrounds distract the eye. A background for almost any is the sky, but a big sheet.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD FLOWER PHOTOGRAPHY

Close-ups pay dividends in flower photography, as this fine snapshot of a water lily conclusively proves.

EVERYONE likes flowers, and every flower will make a likable snapshot. Remember that and you won't lack for picture subjects from now until late fall arrives again.

But at the same time here's something to remember: Flower photography, although it is a very satisfying and pleasant hobby, requires patience and a good deal of practice. You've got to experiment if you expect to excel in your work. But, believe me, it's worth it. Here are a few tips that may help you along the way.

First, make your snapshots close-ups just like our illustration. Work as near to the subject as your camera permits, and if that doesn't bring you within two or three feet, slip a portrait attachment over the lens so that you'll get a bigger image on your negative, or plan to "crop" the picture during enlargement.

Then try to isolate your subject. Don't let confusing background details distract the eye. A perfect background for almost any flower is the sky, but a big sheet of gray cardboard held behind the blossom will make a fine substitute if you can't get a low enough camera angle to use the sky as a backdrop.

Next, watch the light. The most favorable illumination for flower pictures is the early morning or late afternoon sun. You then get nice sidelighting which adds depth and form to your subject. Backlighting, too, is sometimes highly effective. But in either case you'll get better quality snapshots if you use a simple reflector such as a piece of white cardboard, to brighten the shadow portions of your subject.

And use a filter to darken skies, step up contrasts, and give the closest possible rendering of color values in the black-and-white print. Panchromatic film, incidentally, is best for this kind of work.

Finally, do your picture making on calm days when the wind won't shake the flower, or in the morning before the wind begins to blow, and you'll find that you'll have fewer technical problems to contend with and you'll achieve better results.

One Million Soldiers Guard India's Historic Frontiers

INDIA'S rising industries are creating growing class of intelligent workers (above) and educated civic minded city people (below).

NEW INDUSTRIES AID DEFENSE

In the last few years, much of this has changed, and India now has more than the mere beginnings of great industries. About 1,500,000 tons of finished steel are turned out annually from Indian ore; and rifles, machine guns, cannon, armored cars, trucks, ammunition and trench mortars are manufactured in increasing quantities. Not only India's army, but part of Britain's as well, now walks on Indian shoes and wears Indian-made uniforms. And India's civilians, especially in the cities, are rapidly learning to cope with air raids, and helping to reinforce the defenses of their vast country.

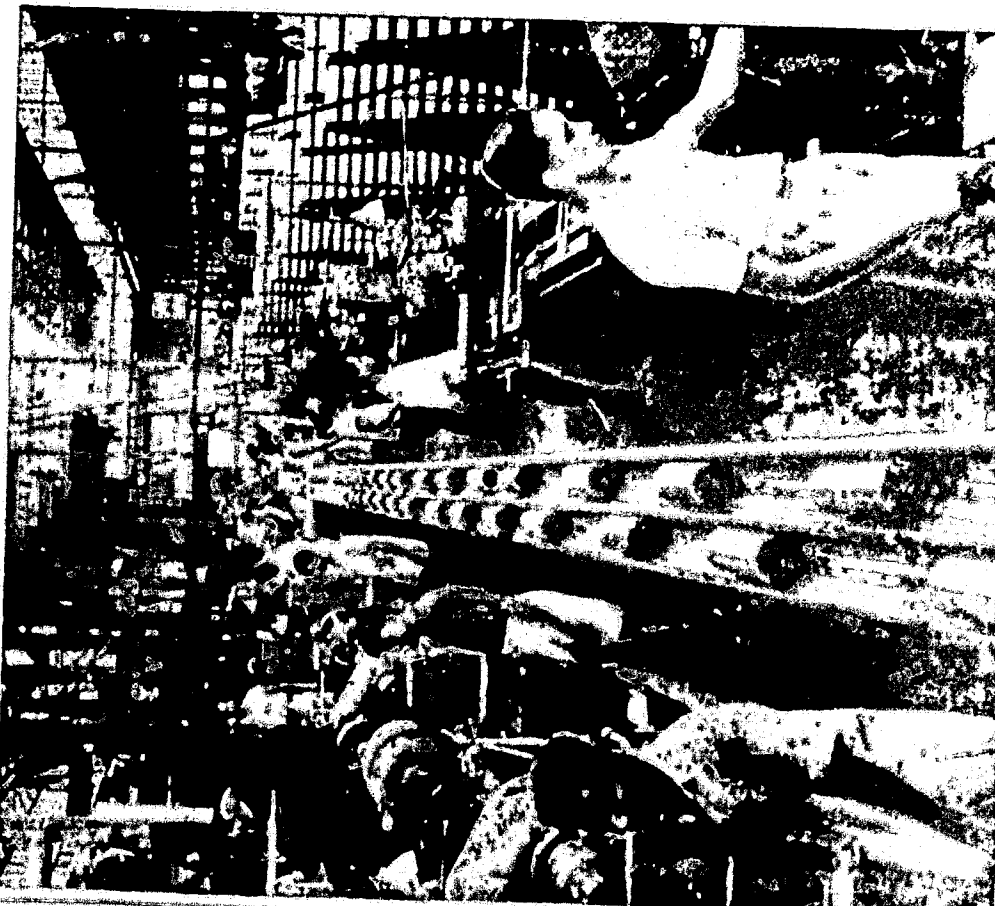

INDIA'S GREAT WEALTH and her greatest potential contribution to the cause of the United Nations are her hundreds of millions of people, including some of the world's toughest fighters, who have proven themselves on a dozen battlefields in this and other wars. Until recently, however, India's fighting men depended almost entirely on arms and equipment imported from Britain and other industrial countries. Too, her civilians, who had not seen a major war in their own country for generations, were generally unprepared to face the shock of a modern "blitz" of tanks and bombers.

GUN PLATFORMS are manufactured in converted railway shops (above) by Indians who now make three-quarters of the 60,000 articles needed for war. India's soldiers fight not only in India and Burma, but also in Africa and the Middle East (below).

INDIA'S one million soldiers are all volunteers, serve mostly under their own, partly under British officers. They now use shells (below) and guns manufactured in India.

We Call It Romance

IT'S JUST a can of soup. But during a long lifetime, the man who made it found some way to advertise it. At first, just a sign over his little soup kitchen, a few newspaper ads, a few billboards. But as the advertising grew, so did the business.

Now the business employs thousands of workers, helps to support tens of thousands of retail clerks and transportation men, and gives the housewife a better, cheaper soup than she could prepare at home.

Back of every heavily advertised article is a romantic story of this kind—the kind of romance that built America.

The following poem composed by Mrs. Bernier's 12 year old sister, Miss Ruth Judkins, was attached to the miniature doll on the handle of the umbrella.

Sometimes we have dull showers,
Monotonous and dreary,
Thunder, lightning and a downpour
Are bound to make us weary.

Then there is another type,
Gay little April showers.

They are very nice you know,
For they bring May flowers.

But this is a different kind;
With the umbrella upside down,

To catch the shower that falls
From kind friends all around.

So march right in and enjoy your-self.

You can't be sheltered from this shower.

Please accept these gifts for?
Which you find in this little bower.
